MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: "Where's What" by Harry Murphy

1. Several weeks ago Mr. [redacted] Deputy Director of Security, asked that arrangements be made to have the Library of Congress publish or release copies of Harry Murphy's book, "Where's What." I had a number of discussions with [redacted] in the Agency Library, who was the point of contact in dealing with the Library of Congress. [redacted] moved quite expeditiously in arranging for Printing and Photography Division to make microfiche copies of the book so that the publication could be made available in unclassified form to the general public.

2. Immediately following the above arrangements, [redacted] Office of Legislative Counsel, indicated that he had some concern about the copyright problems, and he requested that we delay plans for the publication of the book by the Library of Congress. I advised [redacted] that the arrangements had been established quite firmly, copies had been made of the publication, and the word had gone forth that the book would be available to the general public. I indicated that the time had passed where we could cancel or delay the actions which had been taken by the Library of Congress. I discussed this with Ms. [redacted] and she was in complete and total agreement.

3. In my more recent discussions with Ms. [redacted] she indicated that the book had been made available to the public, and there were no particular difficulties encountered. It is noted, however, that on 23 December 1975, Jack Anderson and Les Whitten wrote the attached article concerning Murphy's book.
